

The evolution of the human spirit does not occur in the same way as the evolution of matter, through masses or through the entire body subjected to it. The general ideas, the social deeds that serve as its vehicle constitute several classes which, together, give birth to the intellectual body. The classes of deeds relate to different necessities which, supporting human life, become the organs of its progress. These are the economic, political, social, religious, moral, juridical, artistic, literary and scientific necessities of mankind.

A. D. XENOPOL (1847-1920)