

‘A significant intellectual achievement.’

– DENNIS DELETANT, Visiting Professor of Romanian Studies, Georgetown University, Washington DC

www.ibtauris.com

I.B. TAURIS
PUBLISHERS

CONTESTED FRONTIERS IN THE BALKANS

Ottoman and Habsburg Rivalries in Eastern Europe

Irina Marin

From the Holy Roman Empire and the Ottomans to the Austro-Hungarian Empire and Russia, Eastern Europe has been a battleground between the East and the West and a region of fluid frontiers. In Contested Frontiers in the Balkans Irina Marin follows the history of the Banat of Temesvár, a province situated on the edges of these competing empires and currently divided among Romania, Serbia and Hungary. The history of the Banat is, on a small scale, the history of Central and Eastern Europe as a whole – with its overlapping imperial rules, redrawing of boundaries, composite identities, Procrustean nation-states straddling multi-ethnic regions, the legacy of Communism and its vagaries, and the resuscitation of regionalism within the framework of the European Union. It is also the place where the Romanian Revolution of 1989 started which brought Ceaușescu's Communist dictatorship to an end.

The first history of its kind, this will be an important study of Serbian and Romanian ethnicity, culture and influence, explored through archival documents and a transnational historical approach, as well as providing new insights into the major empires of history and their relationship with the Balkan lands.

'Few works analyse more clearly the multi-layered, multi-ethnic history of Central Europe than this penetrating study of the Banat. Not only does it offer a transnational history of this province, with a focus on the impact and legacy of successive types of imperial rule on a multi-ethnic borderland, but it proposes a different way of looking at the history of the region as a synthesis of converging political and social influences, going beyond the narrow framework of national histories. Based on an impressive familiarity with a wide range of sources, Irina Marin's book represents a significant intellectual achievement.'

– DENNIS DELETANT, Visiting Professor of Romanian Studies, Georgetown University, Washington DC

IRINA MARIN gained her PhD at the School of Slavonic and East European Studies, University College London.

Special Offer Price £38.15 ~~RRP £54.50*~~

Hardback | 248 pages | 216 x 134mm | 9781780761053 | October 2012

Offer expires 30th April 2013

To order online go to www.ibtauris.com
and enter the discount code AN2 when prompted